Dear John:

Thanks for sending me your protocol. I also appreciate your gracious covering letter (which I am utilizing to respond).

As for the research - it is as if you and I are talking different languages. In Prufrock T.S. Eliot says: "I hear the mermaids singing each to each/ they do not sing to me." Who knows which is "correct," or whether correctness exists.

Good luck on your work. Thanks for sharing it with me.

Sincerely,

Daniel Musher, M.D.

Att'n Dr. D. M. Musher, ID Section Chief

Dear Dr. Musher:

Please find enclosed an application for funding to attempt the direct detection of T. pallidum in HIV tissues, and as well perhaps by detection of immunologic priming in vitro.

Your work in the late 80's and early 90's has been very helpful in formulating my concerns about the disappearance of syphilis as a cause of morbidity and mortality in a very promiscuous and highly STD-infected group of men.

I was hoping that you might comment on the concepts and concerns raised in this application, and forward to myself and the Open Society Institute (address in NYC) a brief review. I will keep your comments in confidence (not like the last time!).

Kindest regards,

John B. Scythes
